Course description

Qualification Master of Laws

Field of study Law, public administration, public order and safety

Course summary This programme will provide you with a thorough understanding of the fundamental doctrines of international law, offering various perspectives from theory and practice.

The programme is intended for those already working in, or seeking a career in international organisations, governmental institutions, international non-governmental organisations, or in academia. For those interested, the programme may serve to further engage in an academic career and prepare for a PhD. The programme will provide you with in-depth knowledge of the foundations of public international law and will familiarise you with the current debates in the field. You will obtain skills enabling you to analyse and interpret legal sources, literature, and cases, to research and develop independent opinion on international legal questions, to clearly present findings both orally and in writing to legal specialists as well as non-lawyers, to actively participate in academic debate, and to apply this advanced academic knowledge in public international law in a professional context. The programme is ideally located in The Hague, home of many international legal institutions.

Course description For an overview of the subjects offered by this programme in the current year, check out the e-Prospectus:
