Course description

Qualification Master of Laws

Field of study Humanities, social sciences, communication and arts

Course summary The LLM Labour Law and Employment Relations integrates the study of labour law with related employment relations, labour market and social policy, from an international perspective.

Course description The LLM Labour Law and Employment Relations integrates the study of labour law with related employment relations, labour market and social policy, from an international and European perspective. The program's approach will provide you with the skill-set modern professionals in employment relations need. It offers the opportunity to distinguish yourself in a highly competitive market. The growing importance of multi-national enterprises as well as an increase in international employability call for a new type of professional who is able to cope with international and comparative labor issues from a variety of perspectives. This is true for the European Union's internal market in which complex legal and policy relations arise.

Study subjects The one year master in Labour Law and Employment Relations consist of 60 ECTS: 1. Courses minimum of 3 courses in law (18 ECTS) * A minimum of 12 ECTS in HRM/social sciences courses remaining 12 ECTS may be freely chosen from both sets of courses 2. An internship (3ECTS) 3. (18 ECTS)
